STANLEY'S STATEMENT

Explains His Evansville
Interview Recently Published.

ANSWER EVENING POST.

Promises a Detailed Defense
In His Speech of This Week.

Henderson Evening Journal, Aug. 18, 1907.—A short time ago while in Evansville, on important legal business, and while at dinner, I was approached by a representative of the Evansville Courier, who, among other things called my attention to an article which recently appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, on August 3, and to other similar articles usually emanating in the East, portraying in lurid colors a state of anarchy and warfare in Kentucky. These papers have claimed that this deplored state of affairs exists all over the dark tobacco district of which my Congressional district is a part. In describing this horrible condition both the New York Sun and Saturday Evening Post use this language, "Because of it men sit by night with rifles in their hands to guard their crops and barns; because of it, cities have been called to arms to resist threatened attacks and destruction of property; because of it every night in nineteen counties in Kentucky and Tennessee men sleep with bolts drawn, windows barred and weapons within reach. It has created unrest, suspicion and terror; in a word it has driven peace from the land."

In speaking of such effusions as this I said:

"That the many stories of that nature which have been sent over the country were written by the subsidized agents of the American Tobacco company, that that company is controlled by the same clique who own the Standard Oil company, and is in fact a part of the Standard Oil company's holdings." In a word, I now charge that such articles as that contained in the Saturday Evening Post of August 3, and the recent editorial of the New York Sun, and other similar articles in as far as they describe conditions in my district and in my State are gross exaggerations and that the Standard Oil company is the power behind the throne in the American Tobacco Trust, by both of which statements I unequivocally stand.

The statement that the Standard Oil company is one of the heaviest holders in the American Tobacco company, and that the two companies have acted in unison to suppress the farmer and to destroy his means to exist, was made by me not only in a little interview at Evansville, but more than once on the floor of the Federal Congress, and this is the first time that that statement has ever been questioned or challenged.

As to the truth of the statements in these highly pictorial and sensational stories that are being scattered broadcast over the country, especially the article contained in the Saturday Evening Post, of August 3 I have this to say: that in that article there is not one solitary statement that is not absolutely incorrect or grossly exaggerated, and it was about such articles especially that I was interviewed.

This interview affords me no opportunity to go into detail in correcting the statements made in such articles. If those who most severely criticize me will kindly hold their judgment in abeyance for a few days I shall offer proof of the falsity of all these charges. I believe I can convince the most earnest apologist of the trusts and the most bitter enemy of farmers' organizations and of the tobacco organization in particular, that these statements are either untrue or that the little truth they contain is perverted and exaggerated.

As to the charge so flippantly and so repeatedly made that the night riders are my clients, that I am an apologist for the lawless, and that my speeches are of an incendiary character and dangerous, and that in effect I cry "Don't hang the miscreants from the most convenient tree, don't burn their property, don't ravage their fields," and that this "is the kind of advice which experience teaches is susceptible of a double interpretation," I feel that it is hardly necessary, in the face of five long years in the public eye, to answer not exactly a charge, but an insinuation. An inference utterly unfounded in fact and absolutely unwarranted by any character of interpretation which can be put upon any utterance of mine. It is not necessary at this late day that I should come to my constituents or to the people of the press of this state and declare that always I have stood absolutely, unequivocally and unalterably for the speedy, impartial and rigid enforcement of the law no matter whether it be violated by friend or foe, trust or farmer.

So well was my position upon this question known, and so often had it been expressed, that prior to the so-called night riding, when there was for the first time talk of apprehension of violence, or depredation in the dark tobacco district, that Felix Ewing, chairman of the executive committee, and the moving spirit of the Dark Tobacco Association, telephoned me to come up to his home on the night of Nov. 5, 1905. He was then at Glenraven upon a bed of sickness, to which unfortunately he is still confined. He requested me to go to Springfield in the very heart of the dark tobacco growers' district, and on the following day to address an immense gathering of planters at that place. He said to me above all things, "I wish to prevent any act of lawlessness which may be even remotely attributed to this organization, and I have sent for you because I believe that you will most strongly reprehend any act of that character. The association will have a stenographer who will take your speech and I shall, if possible, put a copy of it into the hands of every member of this association."

In obedience to that call, among other things, I said:

"I am here to speak no word of sympathy or love for the trust, but I will say to the free-born farmers of Robertson county that there is one thing you must respect, and that is the law. I want to say to you that while God's love saved the world, it is his law that moves it. Destroy law and order and turn your back upon the courts of justice, and no man's property is safe, no woman's honor is sacred. Your safety by night and your independence by day is dependent upon law. I have no patience with mobs. There is but one instance on earth

"We deeply regret that such acts do occur, and we again express our earnest disapproval of same. Walter Weiman was expected to start in a balloon from Spitzbergen, Friday, in search of the North Pole. The distance is about 700 miles and he expects, he expects to return in a week.

Taft talked too much in his speech at Columbus, Ohio. He told a joke about a man who was sick and broke and in order to get into a hospital went into an Irish saloon and cursed the Pope. Now all the Catholics are calling him a second Burnard.

President Roosevelt, in the September Everybody's, returns to the attack of the "Nature Fakirs." Over his own signature he repeats the charges of falsehood, directing his fire chiefly against W. J. Wm. S. Taylor offers to come back to Kentucky and stand trial upon the following conditions:

- 1 No part of the reward fund of $100,000 to be used to prosecute him.
- 2 Six Republicans to be put on the jury.
- 3 Bail to be allowed within the limits of $100,000.
- 4 Indictments against all parties used as prosecuting witness to be dismissed.
- 5 The judge to be selected in advance by mutual agreement.

Legislative acts would be required to comply with several of these conditions. With a jury and a judge of his own selection, no witness allowed to turn state's evidence and an agreement to let him run at large, he would condescend to stand trial. Bill is a bird.

Taft stopped in Oklahoma long enough to advise that the new Democratic constitution be turned down. After all the big Secretary is just a cheap politician who would rather have a republican territory than a Democratic state in a presidential election.

LIGHTNING

Destroyed Barn and 20 Tons of Hay.

During the electric storm of last Saturday lightning struck a barn on the farm of Mr. John Edmunds, on the Clarksville road.

Mr. Green Rickman, who has the farm leased, had just gotten his hay crop into the building. The crop was estimated at 20 tons, which with the barn, was entirely consumed. There was no insurance over the contents. Mr. Edmunds is away from home, but it is generally believed that he had no insurance on the barn. If that be true the loss on barn and contents will be about $1,000.

Mrs. M. F. Crenshaw, Mr. Ed Gray, Messrs. Mills Campbell, Joe McCarrroll, Chas. McKee, Allen Nuckolls, George Underwood, Keene Waller, and Clifton Walton composed a party who visited the young people Sunday who had been camping at Mason's Mill. A most enjoyable day is reported.

CLOSE CALL.

Gilmer Bell Barely Escapes A Broken Neck.

Last Sunday Gilmer Bell came near losing his life. He had gone to Mason's Mill with a party of about 20 to remain a week. Sunday, while the young men were bathing in a stream, young Bell, about 15 years of age, made a spring from the slippery bank to dive to the bottom. His feet slipped, which caused him to almost turn a summersault. The mud in the bottom of the stream is a foot or more deep. The diver went far enough over to cause him to strike the mud with the back of his head, and he was so doubled up, as our informant says, as to almost break his neck.

The wrench of his neck gave him considerable pain, but he was carried to the camp where his friends attended to him as best they knew how. He came home Sunday afternoon with Allen Nuckolls and other young men who visited the campers Sunday morning. The whole party will come back to the city today.

Young Bell is the only child of Mrs. Flora Bell, of Dallas, Texas. He has been visiting relatives in the city during his vacation.

The September Circle

In The Circle for September, Ernest K. Coulter writes of "The Big Brothers and the Children's Court" with such enthusiasm for the splendid results which those "Big Brothers" are achieving in the lives of the children of the tenements that the article is an inspiration which must leave its mark in the lives of the readers. A very important article in the September number of The Circle is a description of "The First Self-Governed Jewish Community Since the Fall of Jerusalem," from the pen of David Blaustein, D. D., who, as Superintendent of Educational Alliance, is well qualified to tell of this epoch in the history of the Jewish nation. . . . Viscount S. Aoki, the first Japanese Ambassador, sends through the columns of The Circle "A Peace Message to the American People," a message of kindness, yet conveyed with dignity.

There are many other things no less interesting than "The First Self-Governed Jewish Community," in relating "The Battle of the Salton Sea," tells of one waged between man and nature, while Ernest Harold Baynes, in an article which covers two splendidly illustrated pages of The Circle, describes "Hunting with a Camera."

It is right and entirely proper that the people, especially of the dark tobacco district, should feel a deep and just indignation toward the American Tobacco Company. But I am above all things anxious that the public sentiment result in wrong to no man nor in any outrage or violence to person or to property, but in a strict and rigid enforcement of the law; and I believe that if the law is rigidly and mercilessly enforced, and the people see in it a protecting Aegis, that they will look to the enforcement of its decrees as the only way to make markets for justice and protection. This is my position and from it I shall not be drawn by any criticism however severe, or any calumny however cruel.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Curtain Falls.

Bronzed by months of scouting on those northern plains, a graver, older look upon his face, and the bars of a captain gracing the shoulders of his new cavalry jacket, Donald Brant trotted down the stage road bordering the Bear Water, his heart alternating between hope and dread.

The familiar yellow house at the cross-roads appeared so unattractive as to suggest the thought that Naida must have been inexpressibly lonely during those months of waiting. He knocked at the sun-warmed door. Without delay it was flung open, and a vision of flushed face and snowy drapery confronted him.

"Why, Lieut. Brant! I was never more surprised in my life. Do, pray, come right in. Yes, Naida is here, and I will have her sent for, isn't it?" The young officer slightly averted his eyes. Mr. Wykoff extended hand, and found a convenient chair, as Miss Spencer hastened from the room to announce his arrival.

"Why just at this time?" he questioned.

Mr. Wykoff cleared his throat. "Why—why, you see, we are to be married this evening—Miss Spencer and myself. We shall be so delighted to have you witness the ceremony. It is to take place at the church, and my people insist upon my being quite an affair out of the occasion—those are so popular, you know."

The lady again burst in, her eyes glowing with enthusiasm. "Why, I think it is perfectly delightful. Don't you, Howard? Now Lieut. Brant and Naida can stand up with us. You will, won't you, Lieutenant?"

"That must be left entirely with Naida for decision," he replied, soberly. There was a rustle at the inner door, and Naida stood there. Her eyes met, and the color mounted swiftly to the girl's cheeks. Then he stepped resolutely forward, forgetful of all other presence, and clasped her hand in both his own. Neither spoke a word, yet each understood something of what was in the heart of the other.

"Will you walk outside with me?" he asked, at last. "I have much to say which I am sure you would rather hear alone."

She bent her head, and with a brief word of explanation to the others, the young officer conducted her forth into the bright July sunshine. They walked in silence, side by side, down the bank of the little stream. Brant glanced furtively toward the sweet, girlish face. Then he spoke.

"Naida, he said, gravely, 'I have come back, as I said I would, surely I read welcome in your eyes?'"

"Yes."

"And I have come to say that there is no longer any shadow of the dead between us."

She looked up quickly, her hands clasped, her cheeks flushing. "Are you speaking of the powder house? I understand; perhaps you mistake my meaning."

"I know it all," he answered, soberly. "From the lips of Hampton."

"You have seen him?" Oh, Lieut. Brant, please tell me the whole truth. I have missed him so much, and since the day he rode away to Cheyenne not one word to explain his absence has come back to me. You cannot understand what this means, how much he has become to me through years of absence."

"You have heard nothing?"

"Not a word."

Brant drew a long, deep breath. He had supposed she knew this. At last he said gravely: "Naida, the truth will prove the kindest message. I think. He died in that broken ring of defenders clustered about Gen. Custer on the bluffs of the Little Big Horn."

Her slight figure trembled so violently that he held her close within his arms.

"There was a smile upon his face when we found him. He performed his full duty, Naida, and died as became a soldier and a gentleman."

"But—but, this cannot be! I saw your published list; his name was not among them."

"The man who fell was Robert Nolan."

Gently he drew her down to a seat upon the soft turf of the bank. She looked up at him helplessly, her mind seemingly dazed, her eyes yet filled with doubt.

"Robert Nolan? My father?"

He bent over toward her, pressing his lips to her hair and stroking it tenderly with his hand.

"Yes, Naida, darling; it was truly Robert Hampton Nolan who died in battle, in the ranks of his old regiment—died as he would have chosen to die, thank God! completely cleared of every stain upon his honor. Sit up, little girl, and listen while I tell you."

There is in the story no word which does not reflect nobility upon the soldier's daughter."

She uplifted her white face. "Tell me," she said, "all you know."

He recounted to her slowly, carefully, the details of that desperate journey northward, of their providential meeting on the Little Big Horn of the papers left in his charge, of

In the hospital at Bethune, slowly recovering. His sworn deposition has been forwarded to the department at Washington, and will undoubtedly result in the honorable replacing of your father's name on the army list. I will tell you briefly the main features, together with the few additional facts necessary to make it clear.

"Your father and mine were for many years friends and army comrades. They saw service together during the great war, and afterward upon the plains in Indian campaigning. Unfortunately a slight misunderstanding arose between them. One night they openly quarreled when heated by wine, and exchanged blows. The following evening your father's chance to be officer of the guard and duty, my father, whose wife had then been dead a year, was thoughtless enough to accompany Mrs. Nolan home at a late hour from a post ball. It was merely an act of ordinary courtesy; but gossip magnified the tale.

She bent her head, and with a brief word of explanation to the others, the young officer conducted her forth into the bright July sunshine. They walked in silence, side by side, down the bank of the little stream. Brant glanced furtively toward the sweet, girlish face. Then he spoke.

CAR SHORTAGE PREDICTED.

Railroad Commissioner C. C. McChord's Letter of Advice.

Frankfort, Ky., June 24, 1907.

TERRY COAL & COKE CO., Hopkinsville, Ky.

GENTLEMEN:

Replying to your favor of the 14th instant, I unhesitatingly advise all consumers of coal to lay in a supply during the summer months and thereby avoid the inconvenience which must result on account of a shortage of cars next winter which in my opinion will be much more acute than was the shortage of last winter, unless the consumers lay in their coal supply as suggested.

You are at liberty to publish this in the interest of the producers and consumers of coal.

Yours Very Truly,

C. C. McCHORD, Chairman, R. R. Commission State of Ky.

The railroad and coal operating officials of Western Kentucky have given out the same official notice, and urge us to advise our stockholders, and customers to lay in their coal this summer.

Last winter's experience and high prices, together with the above timely information should be sufficient warning, and we trust our people will take advantage of it and act at once.

We are ready to supply you with coal in car load lots over either R. R. any day "the best coal at summer time prices," and trust that you will give your orders early while we can get the cars to ship in.

Yours Very Truly,
